Dear David,

I understand that the meeting at LSE went off very well recently and I will send you a bill as soon as possible. However, for future reference you should know that the delivery of the wine created considerable difficulties. No-one knew what this was connected with and there is no mechanism for delivering these goods to the School in the way that you ordered them. If the society uses the School again in the future you will have to either order wine through the School or bring the wine directly yourselves on the day. I cannot have the porters and everyone else running around identifying unidentifiable orders and put to considerable trouble in the way that occurred. I hope you will understand.

Yours sincerely,

Professor R J Bennett
