

THE ANGLO-CATALAN
SOCIETY

XXI Annual Conference

First Circular

14th May, 1975

Dear Colleague,

This year sees the 21st anniversary of the institution of the Anglo-Catalan Society, and to mark the occasion a special residential conference will be held in Mansfield College, Oxford, from Friday 26th to Sunday 28th September, 1975.

A programme of lectures and events is being organized which, it is hoped, will fit the celebration and be of interest to all members. Miquel Porter from Barcelona will speak on the modern Catalan cinema and there will be a showing of some recent short films. It is hoped that Eduard Delgado and Maria Vilanova will perform one of their own plays and lead a symposium on the contemporary Catalan theatre. There will also be talks on modern history, literature and urban architecture.

Members are requested to return the enclosed booking form to me as soon as possible and, in any case, before the end of June. Mansfield is a small College, with sleeping accommodation for a maximum of about 55 guests and about 70 at table. There is a limited number of rooms with two beds, suitable for families or for friends willing to share. Since interest in the Conference is expected to be considerable, members are seriously urged to book early to avoid disappointment.

In order to minimise postal costs, a second circular, containing full details and the complete Conference programme, will be sent only to those who have indicated a firm interest in attending.

Yours sincerely,

Alan Yates
