Dear Paul,

I'm afraid that I've been terribly dilatory about answering your enquiry, but this past term has been even more hectic than usual (anything up to twenty-six tutorials a week, besides marking & lecturing - & writing one new set of lectures), & yesterday was honestly the first day that I've had a morning free to go & bung in a slip for Seris in the Bodley, wait for him to appear, consult the All Souls MS catalogue, & pay a visit to the Library Clerk.
Answer : All Souls MS No.189 is in All Souls Library (& not deposited in the Bodleian) ; All Souls Library is open from 10 a.m. till 4 p.m. throughout July, but will be closed all August & September. And you should write to Sir Edmund Craster, The Librarian, All Souls College, asking for permission to come & see the MS & saying for what purpose you want to do so. OK ?

By the way, ref. Manyé, I've a feeling you must have forgotten that I said at that committee-meeting that the BBC side of publicity was already laid on, as Joan Gili had arranged with Manyé for me to do a talk on the Congress. When no contract appeared, I checked with Manyé & found that you had already done the talk, because he had assumed that we had agreed to supersede the existing arrangements when he got a letter from you saying that you had been instructed to write to him at a committee-meeting.

Best wishes for the Long Vac,
Yours ever,

Robert.
