Dear Paul,

I got your letter + the BBC correspondence this morning. Thank you for it. But didn't we agree that the letter should go to the Foreign Office.
I know dear Mané was very insistent that that was the place to send any protest, + that your first draft was to that august and superior body.
I enclose a rather longer summary of my paper which you may put to any use you choose.

I'm afraid I never asked after your father's health when you told me he was ill: hope he is better now.

For ever + a day or so,

Steff.
